About the Author

Tali and Ophira Edut (The AstroTwins) began their astrological journey in 1992, when a computerized printout of their charts jolted them into a metaphysical awakening. Wanting to know how the heck someone's time, date, and place of birth could reveal so much about their character, they delved into an inquiry, using friends, family members, historical figures, and pop stars as case studies. Their fascination grew into an obsession-and then, a career.

Today, The AstroTwins reach over 40 million readers a month with their horoscopes in print, online, and broadcast. Their columns and predictions have appeared in Teen People, Us Weekly, OK!, Brides.com, Lifetime TV's website, and numerous other places. The AstroTwins have been featured on MTV, E!, The Style Network, and in the New York Times. They have read charts for celebrities including Beyonce, Stevie Wonder, and Sting at red-carpet events, and appear regularly on Sirius Radio to give live astrological advice.

Tali and Ophira are Detroit natives who live in New York City with their posse of miniature dachshunds. Ophira also lives with her husband and stepdaughter.

Love and commitment mean something different to each specific sign. In practical terms, what turns on a Pisces ain't gonna rev up a Virgo's engine. But since your Pisces ex-boyfriend loved you in heels and black fishnets, you mistakenly assume your virginal Virgo will get all hot and bothered when you slip on the stockings. (Hopefully, you've at least bought a new pair. Virgos are clean freaks!) Instead, he runs for the hills.

Or, you read in Cosmopolitan that "stripper chic" is the latest seduction craze, so you take one of those pole-dancing classes that's all the rage at your gym. Your Gemini man loves it and enjoys a few encores before he disappears. But when, months later, you stage the routine for your new Taurus guy, the curtain falls faster than you can say "lap dance."

Maybe you're doing the wrong thing with the right guy, or the right thing...but with the wrong guy.

Not sure? We are. We've been studying the secrets of every sign for years. And our advice has gotten actual results. We've helped friends get married, gently steered others to better matches, gotten the drama queens to actually communicate with their partners (for the record, yelling, sobbing, and making life-or-death demands do not count as communication).

See, once you learn the basics-what to expect and not expect from a particular sign-you're free to make choices in your own best interest. There's nothing more relieving than to discover that you're not defective...you're just applying the wrong techniques to someone who could very well be the right person. Or that your nagging suspicion is true: You've been casting your pearls before swine, and it's time to move on to a better match.
